(hear, think, understand)

DEAN PARKIN

What is a Voice to Parliament?

Dean is a Quandamooka man who has been closely involved in the process that resulted in the historic Uluru Statement from the Heart, Dean continues to advocate for constitutional and structural reform as Director of From the Heart.

What is the 2023 Referendum?

This vote will give all Australians the chance to come together and consider a change to our constitution that will honour and celebrate the rights, history, and ongoing relationship of Indigenous Australians with this land. It's a rare chance to make a major positive impact now and for future generations.

Australia has been considering constitutional recognition for more than 15 years. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have asked that the form of recognition come through a Voice to Parliament, which will give advice on laws and policies that affect Indigenous people.

This is what the Australian people are now being asked to decide: Should we recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in The Constitution, with a Voice?

A Voice will provide advice to the Federal Parliament about laws and policies, through a consultative policy making process that delivers meaningful structural change.
